LEZ GO OUT

O

October in Key West: The month the island goes full drag, full glitter and full send. It's Fantasy Fest Fam!

October in Key West is when the island stops pretending to be... normal. (Not that she ever really was.) The breezes return, the sunsets sharpen, and suddenly the whole place starts vibrating with the kind of anticipation you can feel in your, erm, teeth. Fantasy Fest is coming — and the island behaves like she's been waiting all year to show off. This year's theme: Musical Icons and Iconic Musicals!

For queer women, October feels like stepping into a world built by the most theatrical, most creative, most delightfully unhinged parts of the community. The costumes get bigger. The makeup gets brighter. The confidence gets louder. And the island becomes a stage where everyone is invited to be their boldest, weirdest, most expressive self.

The first half of the month is the warm-up. Decorations appear like little winks from the universe. Locals start testing costume ideas in grocery store aisles. Glitter becomes a casual daytime accessory. You can feel Fantasy Fest stretching her wings, getting ready to take flight. Lesbians on the island start planning group themes, coordinating outfits, and debating whether this is finally the year someone commits to a full body paint moment.

And then the events begin — the pre-parties, the art shows, the street fairs, the early costume nights where everyone is still figuring out how dramatic they want to be. Spoiler: very dramatic. October is when Key West's creativity hits maximum voltage. You see couples in elaborate matching looks, friend groups in costumes that clearly required a group chat, a spreadsheet and Mary who can build any kind of set, float or background needed with the precision of a seasoned architect. And, of course, there's that one woman who always shows up in something so spectacular she becomes the unofficial mascot of the night.

The island's energy becomes electric. Every street feels alive. Every bar feels like a backstage dressing room. Every conversation feels like it's happening in the middle of a parade. Fantasy Fest isn't just an event — it's a transformation. Key West becomes a living, breathing art piece, and everyone gets to contribute a brushstroke.

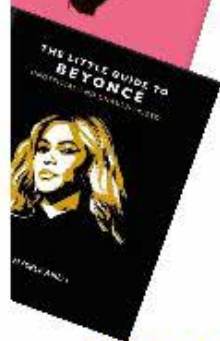

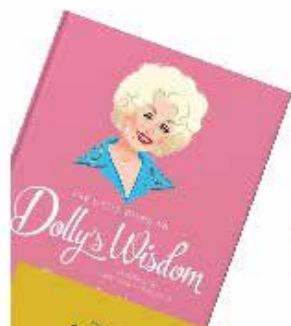

And in the middle of all this chaos, the ocean remains the island's grounding force. October is prime time for Danger Charters. Their swim, snorkel, kayak and paddleboard tours become the perfect daytime escape — a way to slip into the mangroves or the wide open ocean, breathe, laugh, and enjoy the island's natural beauty before diving back into the glitter storm. Maybe, add a little tan to the canvas. There's something grounding about paddling through shady tunnels while knowing you'll be in full costume by sunset after a solid disco nap. They say, saltwater heals everything so it should work well on that hangover, too.

And then Fantasy Fest hits full stride. The parades, the costumes, the painted bodies, the dancing, the creativity that borders on theatrical genius. The island becomes a kaleidoscope — color, movement, music, joy. Lesbians thrive here, weaving through the crowds with confidence, humor, and that unmistakable Key West swagger. It's chaotic, it's expressive, it's unforgettable. Just be aware that sometimes your female twosome may be just the addition someone else is looking to add to their costume. Don't say I didn't warn you. No judging here!

Restaurants glow during Fantasy Fest and everyone participates. The patios fill with laughter, the bars buzz with anticipation, and the conversations feel brighter. You see locals who've been planning their looks for months, visitors who are overwhelmed in the best way, and couples who treat Fantasy Fest like their annual pilgrimage. The sense of community is palpable — warm, welcoming, and wonderfully queer. Shirt and shoes required... of course..

October in Key West is a celebration of creativity, courage, and joyful chaos. It's the month when the island becomes a canvas and everyone becomes an artist. If you're a lesbian who loves this place, Fantasy Fest feels like watching your favorite girl step into her spotlight and absolutely own it. So Lez Go Out and bring the lavender sparkle to the party. “THE TERRIBLE, HORRIBLE, NO GOOD, VERY BAD GAY: ESSAYS” BY ELIOT GLAZER

c.2026, Gallery Books | $28.99 | 240 pages

You try, and you try.

Once, twice, you go back at that thorny issue, the dream you have, the punchline that's not hitting quite right. Sometimes, time is all you need to make it better, or a new approach, or a second look. And then there are days when you actually get things right, as in “The Terrible, Horrible, No Good, Very Bad Gay” by Eliot Glazer, and it's all good.

Throughout his life, Eliot Glazer has made mistakes. And it's okay, everybody trips and falls now and then. In his case, though, he's perfectly willing to document his failures, foibles, and whoopsies in this book.

He writes of his mother, Sandi, “a Queens-born balabosta” who wouldn't tolerate laziness in herself or Glazer. He found work as soon as he was legally able to do so, and he had many jobs throughout high school. He was a gardener, ice cream scooper, camp counselor, golf caddy, chocolatier, telemarketer, and video store clerk. The one that fit him best, however, was working at Talbots, a department store for older women, where he found his people.

Even with all those jobs, he was a theater kid in his time off, little though it was. Back then, he was just a boy growing up on Long Island but swagger was important, so swagger he did. He still appreciates a good Broadway show, even the silliest ones.

Glazer says that he had just recently come out when gayness exploded on TV with Will and Grace and Queer Eye for the Straight Guy, with which he was obsessed. It helped him feel not othered, he says. Producers of the reboot asked him to be a second-generation Eye, but Glazer turned them down, though he thinks he'd have been good at it.

The show helped him with love of décor. His unexpected advisory skills came naturally, through age and wisdom and learning that wild partying isn't really so much fun.

As for finding love, well, that's a long, boy-meets-boy-meets-boy story..

So you're looking for something to easily pick up and put down, something that speaks to your inner impatience? You'll find that in "The Terrible, Horrible, No Good, Very Bad Gay," a book that's practically meant for you to skip around and you don't have to read everything.

Essays can be like that, which is nice, even refreshing. Author Eliot Glazer is entertaining enough to make things work, engaging enough to keep it moving, and funny enough to make you want more of what he has to say. He's open with his life and, despite his fame, his writing isn't lofty; you can expect stories that'll make you snort and ones with spice, but also some surprisingly tender moments that soften this book in a way that's just right.

Readers who want a quick, mostly-lite book to finish will find something appealing in this collection of essays. If you don't mind a bit of non-linearity and you need a laugh, "The Terrible, Horrible, No Good, Very Bad Gay." is worth a try.

MY BIG GAY LIFE

Brad Loekle

DON'T GO CHASING WATERFALLS

The New York Post recently had a lukewarm hot take on nutrition. Their big reveal: people should stop eating lettuce because lettuce is "mostly water." Although, not if you get your lettuce in a Taylor Farms bag. If you get your lettuce from Taylor Farms, then your lettuce is mostly water and precarious amount of poop bacteria. In culinary circles they call that "umami." Oh, also human beings are mostly water. So, this is your annual reminder to not eat humans. Though, these days, getting away with cannibalism is probably cheaper than trying to buy hamburger meat. Good times!

And though I don't believe Americans should stray even further off the path of eating real food; I do think we've fetishized hydration to an extreme now. Do I think reusable water bottles are great for both people and the environment: sure. Do I think you need to be carrying a keg of H2O around with you, probably not.

My mother and her friends are all in their 70s and 80s. One of them recently told me that she had to start carrying around her toddler-sized water bottle with her "other arm" because her doctor said the weight of always carrying things on one side of her body was messing up her hips. The only thing she ever carries around is that water bottle. Her fixation on hydration is actually giving her hip dysplasia. What are we doing here, people?!

Most days, I go for a walk. When I'm on tour, I find it's a good way to get a feel for a city. And, when I'm home, it's a nice way to look for cute guys with cuter dogs and see if I can find love in a hopeless place. I was walking down along the marina in San Diego last week. A lovely place to walk. And almost every single person was carrying a giant water bottle. Many were decorated with sassy phrases. "My other bottle is a wine bottle" and "Live, Love, Rosé" and, my personal favorite, "Jesus touched my water." (I have a suspicion that the people of San Diego have a drinking problem.)

I wasn't shocked to see most people carrying around water bottles. But what I was shocked at was the measurements of these bottles. I don't care how fast you're running to try and escape death; you do not need more than 32oz of water for your jog. I mean, at some point you have to just double up on the aquatic dumbbells you're all dragging around and just call it strength training.

I saw one woman who was dressed far better than any of us. She was in a simple corporate casual outfit, not the assortment of athleisure wear we were all in. But she was still carrying this giant metal water jug of a container. I'll give her credit. It didn't have any silly sayings or decals on it. It was a simple, sleek silver cylinder with what seems to be a seamless screw top lid. No tacky plastic straw popping out the top. I commented as I mall-walked past her, "I love your water bottle." Because, although it was far too large, like the rest of them, at least it had some style. It was the classiest water bottle I'd seen.

The only trouble is it wasn't a water bottle. The shock on her face when I said what I said made me take a closer look as I passed her. It was an urn. It was an urn with a loved one's ashes in it that she was taking down to the marina to scatter into the sea.

When I am in San Diego, I only walk in the park now.

ASK NANA

E-mail your questions to nana@keywestgayrag.com

Dear Nana,

My boyfriend has the largest blackhead on his back that I've ever seen. I mean, it's Dr. PimplePopper-level huge. He won't let me try to remove it. He hates going to the doctor and says that he knows it's not a medical problem so he'd rather just leave it be. But it's absolutely heinous and I can't stand to look at it when I'm topping him in doggy. What can I do?!

So, you don't like looking at his humpback while you're barebacking him, huh? You're kind of in a pickle, sweet cheeks. On one hand, I totally get where you're coming from. I wouldn't want to stare down that mess every time you watch him leave a room either. But on the other hand, or shoulder, "his body, his choice!" So, what's a boy to do? Have you tried giving him a back massage and trying to work your way up to the problem? Or, you could buy him a cupping therapy session at a spa and tip them extra to suction cup that chimera out of him. And, if none of that works, you're just going to have to ham-slam him in the missionary position until he changes his mind.

Dear Nana,

My boyfriend wants to go as zombie Dolly Parton this Halloween. He's a huge fan of hers and he totally means it as a sort of homage to her, but I think it's in terrible taste. I don't want to ruin his fun but I think people will take it badly. What should I do?

Break up with that monster! Honestly, what is wrong with some of you people?! I turned a blind eye when I saw a "Slutty Ruth Bader Ginsberg" a few years ago. But I cannot stay silent when it comes to Dolly. She will always be a national treasure and was probably the last decent American left. Can't he just wear a harness and a jockstrap like the rest of your people?! Has he no decency left? You tell that little cock-goblin that he's gonna have to go through me to get to Dolly. I will beat his ass so bad that it will look like a coat of many colors when I'm done with it!

DO YOU HAVE PROBLEMS? OF COURSE YOU DO! WHY NOT LET NANA HELP YOU?!

... come as you are

MONROE COUNTY TOURIST DEVELOPMENT COUNCIL

WHORE--SCOPES

AQUARIUS JAN 20 - FEB 18

You're the reason shampoo has instructions.

PISCES FEB 19 - MAR 20

I see you're still trying to make that haircut happen.

ARIES MAR 21 - APR 19

You look like you struggle with a two-piece puzzle.

TAURUS APR 20 - MAY 20

Your wardrobe gives major "renovation budget constraint" realness.

GEMINI MAY 21 - JUN 20

You've never met a buffet you couldn't defeat.

CANCER JUN 21 - JUL 22

That outfit screams, "I bought this at the gas station on the way here."

LEO JUL 23 - AUG 22

You're the reason they turn the lights on at 4 AM.

VIRGO AUG 23 - SEP 22

You're like a broken record, except the song wasn't good to begin with.

LIBRA SEP 23 - OCT 22

You're a solid 4 on a good day, and today is a rainy Tuesday.

SCORPIO OCT 23 - NOV 21

You're the type of guy who lists "traveling" as a hobby but only goes to the Garden Bar.

SAGITTARIUS NOV 22 - DEC 21

I love your hair, it really distracts from everything else.

CAPRICORN DEC 22 - JAN 19

Who chose that outfit for you, a blind raccoon?
